

HO CHI MINH CITY versus HANOI:
which is the best place to visit for food-lovers?

Author: Quang Phong

1. Introduction

1.1. Background

Tourism has developed to a significant extent recently. Among different regions in the world, South East Asian countries have proved to become promising destinations for travelers, and Vietnam is not an exception. Located in the center of the region, Vietnam is a country of various natural wonders, different cultural heritages, and numerous man-made landmarks. Among its attractions, Hanoi (Vietnam's capital city) and Ho Chi Minh City (the country's biggest city) are recognized as the two most popular choices to visit.

1.2. Problem and research objective

The 2 biggest cities not only in Vietnam but also in Indochina Peninsular, namely Ho Chi Minh City and Hanoi, have always made foreign travelers and even domestic ones indecisive to select the more suitable city to visit. The S-shaped country is narrow but long, which means the distance between the two biggest cities is large. For travelers with a limited time budget, visiting one city per travelling is virtually the only option. Therefore, they will benefit from understanding the similarities and differences between the two cities.

Representing (and sharing) the viewpoints of "young food addicts" who always hunger for more and more good food on their journeys, the author will compare and contrast Ho Chi Minh City (Thành phố Hồ Chí Minh, in Vietnamese) and Hanoi (Hà Nội, in Vietnamese) with regards to food-related aspects to give some hints to their decisions. As mentioned, the main target audience is travelers who desire to come to Vietnam. More importantly, this can be used by investors and business owners to expand their market in either of the 2 cities based on understanding the gaps.

1.3. Research question

The following questions need to be answered before some conclusions can be drawn:

1/ What are the most common venues in each city?

- 2/ What are the most common restaurants in each city?
- 3/ What are the most common venues in each district?
- 4/ What are the most common restaurants in each district?
- 5/ What are the most common restaurants in each ward?
- 6/ How many clusters can we categorize districts within each city based on restaurant-related venues?
- 7/ How diverse are each district's restaurants in terms of cuisines?
- 8/ How diverse are each city's restaurants in terms of cuisine??
- 9/ Which city has a higher number of restaurants per residents?

Also, the author visualizes all information on the map to have a clearer look at the results.

2. Data acquisition and cleaning

2.1.Data acquisition

There are 3 sources of data used in this project.

The first data source, where data on administrative units of Ho Chi Minh City and Hanoi are scraped, is from <https://www.citypopulation.de>. In details, data on Ho Chi Minh City Municipality, Districts and Communes' names, levels, and populations is taken from <https://www.citypopulation.de/en/vietnam/thanhphohochiminh/admin/>. The similar data of Hanoi is taken from <https://www.citypopulation.de/en/vietnam/hanoi/admin/>. The data consists of name of units, their levels, and their populations. For the sake of simplicity and feasibility, the scope of this project covers 19 urban districts (and their wards) of HCMC and excludes 5 remaining rural districts (and their child rural communes or townships). Similarly, only 13 urban districts (and their wards) in Hanoi are covered. It should be noted that the population census was taken on 01 April 2009.

Second, the coordinates of locations in HCMC and Hanoi are taken from OpenStreetMap via Nominatim API. The latitudes and longitudes of the cities, their districts, and their wards are respectively gathered for using in this project. Due to certain reasons, some coordinates are not correct, and will be replaced manually by the author.

Third, information about venues is taken from Foursquare. In details, the names, and categories of venues in HCMC and Hanoi will be gathered through the API provided by Foursquare.

2.2.Data cleaning

After downloading the data, first, the author decides to drop entries for districts, rural communes, and townships because the project only covers urban districts and their wards. Next, the author changes the name of these districts and wards by converting Vietnamese words (with 6 tones: ` ´ ˆ ˜ ˘ and letters such as: ê, â, ã, ô, ơ, ư, đ) to monotonal words. Unlike English, which is a pitch language, Vietnamese is a tonal language, in which words can differ in tones (like pitches in music) in addition to consonants and vowels. Thus, these words must be converted to be easier for reading by English viewers and more importantly, to become congruent with OpenStreetMap data. This is conducted by importing a library named Unidecode. Subsequently, Vietnamese words including “quan” (“quận”) and “phuong” (“phường”) are replaced by “District” and “Ward”, which are put before or after the proper names depending on their characteristics. In the next stage, the original data frames, which consist both districts and wards, are separated into distinct data frames for wards and districts. For ward data table, the names of the districts are put after the corresponding wards so as to match the OpenStreetMap’s data later. Finally, after joining the districts and wards with their coordinates, entries with null values will be investigated and filled with proper values if possible; otherwise they will be dropped. Other data transformations are supported by Pandas.

3. Data exploration

3.6. Restaurant density

The number of restaurants in HCMC per resident is 1 per 12667 people while that figure in Hanoi is slightly higher, at 1 per 11452 residents.

4. Data modelling

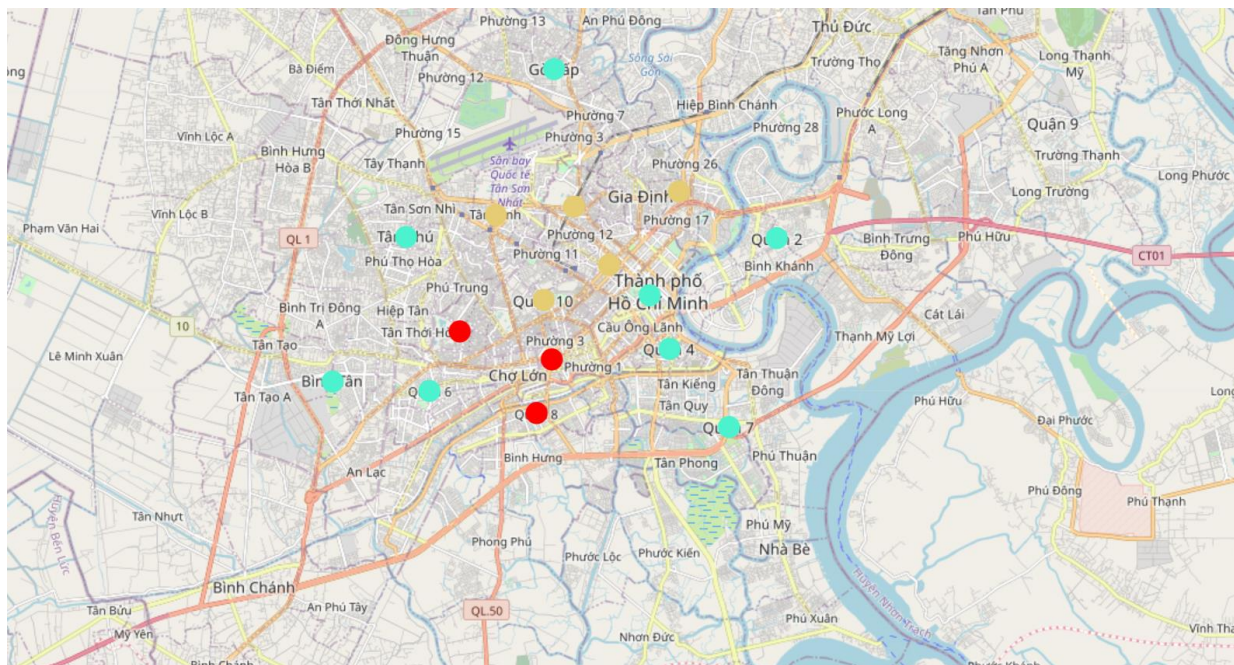

Here K-means clustering technique is applied to group districts of Ho Chi Minh and Hanoi respectively in terms of restaurants. K-means clustering is applied to see if there is any cluster of district in terms of restaurants so that travelers can make better plans to explore cuisines with the support of Scikit-Learn.

4.1. Clusters in Ho Chi Minh City

There are 3 clusters in HCMC.

	Full name	Status	Population	Latitude	Longitude	Cluster Labels
0	Binh Tan District	Urban District	572132	10.749809	106.605664	1
1	Binh Thanh District	Urban District	457362	10.804659	106.707848	2
2	District 1	Urban District	180225	10.774540	106.699184	1

12	Go Vap District	Urban District	522690	10.840150	106.671083	1
13	Phu Nhuan District	Urban District	174535	10.800118	106.677042	2
14	Tan Binh District	Urban District	421724	10.797979	106.653805	2
15	Tan Phu District	Urban District	398102	10.791640	106.627302	1

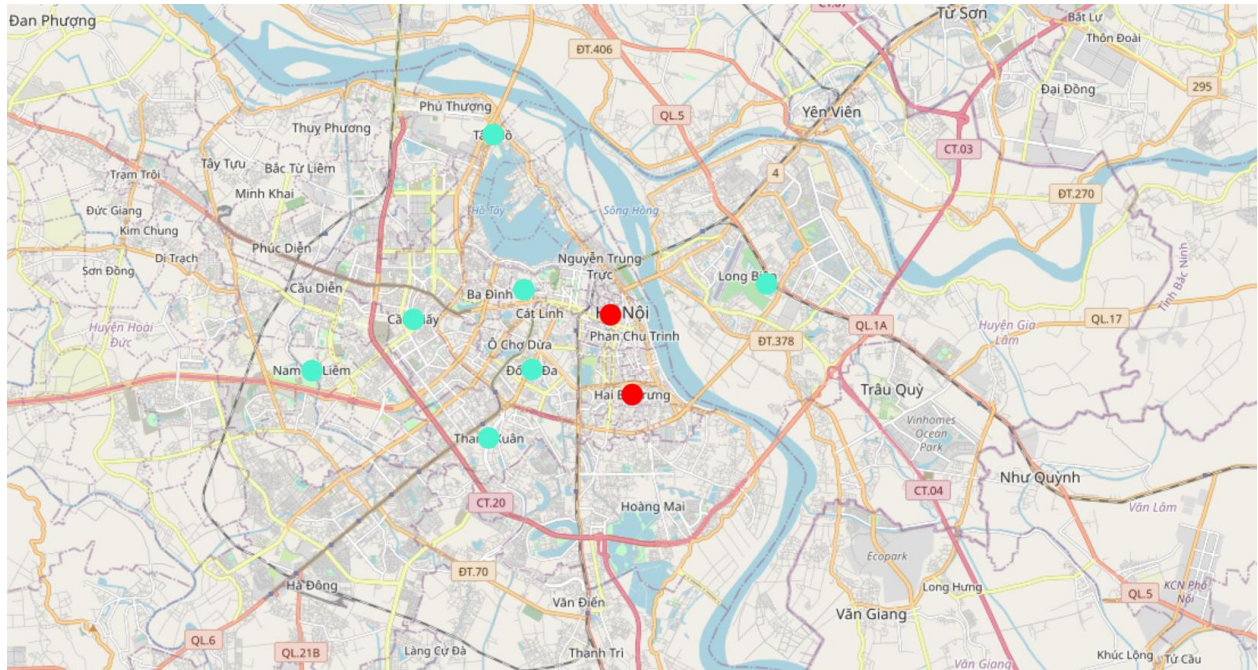

4.2. Clusters in Hanoi

There are 2 clusters in Hanoi.

	Full name	Status	Population	Latitude	Longitude	Cluster Labels
0	Ba Dinh District	Urban District	225910	21.035549	105.824840	1
1	Cau Giay District	Urban District	225643	21.027277	105.791464	1
2	Dong Da District	Urban District	370117	21.012920	105.827196	1
3	Hai Ba Trung District	Urban District	295726	21.005970	105.857484	0
4	Hoan Kiem District	Urban District	147334	21.028524	105.850716	0
5	Long Bien District	Urban District	226913	21.037154	105.897839	1
6	Nam Tu Liem District	Urban District	169586	21.012846	105.760874	1
7	Tay Ho District	Urban District	130639	21.079042	105.815432	1
8	Thanh Xuan District	Urban District	223694	20.993687	105.814301	1

5. Result and discussion

In terms of venues, the 2 most popular in 2 cities are: Cafe/Coffee Shop and Vietnamese Restaurant. The 2 cities do not differ regarding this aspect. They are both great destinations to explore coffee culture and cuisine of Vietnam.

In terms of restaurants, the 3 most popular restaurants in HCMC are: Vietnamese Restaurant, Seafood Restaurant, Chinese Restaurant. In terms of restaurants, the 3 most popular restaurants in Hanoi are: Vietnamese Restaurant, Japanese Restaurant, Fast Food Restaurant. For seafood lovers and Chinese food lovers, HCMC is a better destination. However, for Japanese cuisines and fast-food lovers, Hanoi must be their choice.

In terms of diversity, given the research scope, the number of restaurants per resident in HCMC is: 1 per 12667, slightly lower than that of Hanoi, which is 11452. The number of different types of restaurants in HCMC is: 31, slightly lower than that of Hanoi, which is 33. Thus, food-lovers may prefer Hanoi, but the difference is not that much. The 2 cities appear to be similarly the same regarding diversity of restaurants' choices of cuisine and restaurant density.

According to the map, the 3 clusters in HCMC based on restaurant venues are:

+ Cluster 0: Dist. 11, Dist. 5, Dist. 8, where Chinese restaurants dominate the foreign cuisine market, though Vietnamese restaurants are popular.

+ Cluster 1: Binh Thanh Dist., Phu Nhuan Dist., Tan Binh Dist., Dist. 10, Dist. 3, where foreign cuisines are diverse, and Vietnamese restaurants are extremely popular.

+ Cluster 2: Dist. 1, Dist. 2, Dist. 3, Dist. 4, Dist. 7, Binh Tan Dist., Dist. 6, Go Vap Dist., Tan Phu Dist, where foreign cuisines are diverse, and Vietnamese restaurants are also popular. However, the diversity of cuisines there is higher.

Therefore, for travelers desiring to explore Vietnamese cuisine, it is advisable to visit eateries in Binh Thanh Dist., Phu Nhuan Dist., Tan Binh Dist., Dist. 10, Dist. 3 while for Chinese cuisine lovers, it is a must to visit Dist. 11, Dist. 5, Dist. 8.

Meanwhile, as can be seen in the map, the 2 clusters in Hanoi based on restaurant venues are:

+ Cluster 0: Hai Ba Trung District, Hoan Kiem District, where Vietnamese restaurants are popular and relatively easier to find compared to other districts

+ Cluster 1: all remaining urban districts

Therefore, for travellers desiring to explore Vietnamese cuisine, it is advisable to visit eateries in Hai Ba Trung and Hoan Kiem District first.

With regards to clusters, HCMC is divided to more distinct clusters apparently, thus it is more interesting. This also helps travelers plan their visits easier so that they can explore all cuisines available there without wasting time searching places.

6. Conclusion

The comparison of HCMC and Hanoi from the perspective of a food hunter ends here after giving some hints on the differences and similarities between 2 cities. Definitely, each of the cities proves to be a great land to explore domestic foods as well as foreign one. However, there are still some differences worth keeping in mind before choosing their holiday destination.

Final decisions are up to travelers based on their preferences for any specific cuisine and their available time. With less available time, one should visit Hanoi for their first travel to Vietnam to explore cuisines. With more time, one should consider Ho Chi Minh City for their first travel as the clusters are more distinct and more districts deserve exploring.
